Farmingville, NY – On May 12, Councilman Kevin LaValle (center) met with home schooled teens who attended the Long Island Classical Conversations at the West Sayville Reformed Baptist Church. Classical Conversations supports home schooling parents by cultivating the love of learning through a Christian worldview in fellowship with other families. The event was to allow the home school teens to better understand the community in which they live, and to get to know some of their elected officials and community leaders.

Councilman LaValle said, "It was great to spend some time with such a terrific group of youngsters. They were very interested in learning more about my role as a Town Councilman and I was happy to answer the questions that they had."
